Gendered Public Space

The seminar is designed to explore the range of gendered analysis in the culturally diverse context of Berlin. It is using a hybrid and interdisciplinary approach and spanning Sociology, Architecture, Philosophy, Literature, Geography and Urban Planning.

This bilingual seminar is organized as a part of the seminar series “Berlin in Dialogue” for refugee, German, and international students by the Berlin Institute for Integration and Migration research. The seminars have been granted the prize “Menschen mit Hintergrund” by the university of Regensburg and the BAMF in December 2016.

The first part of the seminar will be dedicated to Space, body and gender, their political, socio-economic and cultural dimensions. Focusing on their interdependent and multilayered relationships. It will encompass analysis of femininities and masculinities in relation to place.

The second part of the seminars will focus on the complex and multi-layered sphere of influences of gender. It will also consider the connection or the interdependencies between gender and topics like violence, intersectionality of power and difference, post-colonialism, migration and transnationalism, embodied geometics, war, religion, nature, environment and resources, family and work, gendered labour, power practices and binaries of production and social reproduction.

Gender, diversity and multiculturalism will be the central themes of our focus in the third part. With the goal of understanding the relation between gender identity, the city of Berlin and its development. It assess the process of involvement or non/ involvement of migrants from developing countries living in post-colonial western European society of Berlin from the perspective of gender relations.
